

Momentum Flow

Momentum will be the marketing tool that small service businesses can use to push their marketing and targeting forward in one place.

This map will cover the user's needs and understanding, as well as how they would use the app. It includes all the features a version would have, color-coded to what I imagined a first version would have, and what I would love to see it have.

About the Functional Needs of Roofers

Most roofers operate as lean as they can. Roofers in the 3MM-6MM earning range typically have an owner, an administrator, a lead setter, a sales manager, 3-5 door knockers, 2-3 Marketing vendors.

Key Players

Owner- Oversees the day-to-day, may run some inspections or help coordinate orders. Concerned about ROI and overall management.

Admin- Responsible for insurance coordination, orders, etc. Typically doing the work of 2-3 people.

Lead Setter- Answers phones, sets inspections, sends reminders, reschedules

Sales Manager- Oversees 2-3 main salespeople, the main person who decides the door-knocking strategy, and resolves escalations

Business Development Rep (Sales Dude)- Sometimes is the canvasser, sometimes only takes set leads. Typically first line in sales, first customer contact, the pivotal "close or not" person.

Door Knockers/Canvassers - Sometimes these are teams deployed to weed out slammed doors, they get the person talking and set up an inspection to time, and then sales is sent out. More often, though, this is a BDR that does the inspection and pitch all at once.

Marketing Vendors - This is one of three things in small/mid-size roofers. An agency that gets rotated out roughly every 9 months, an internal person who is wearing too many hats, or a fractional CMO style setup (like Ravenized).

The Pain Points

The biggest pain point that stalls growth for roofers at this stage is not knowing the soul of their market well enough to close higher than 25-28% on marketing leads, and 7-10% on door-knocking leads. They find one avenue that generates leads and ride that until it dies.

Momentum helps soften the ground with data-based understanding, and makes it simple to put into action.

BDRs | Canvassers- get direction for where and how to pitch, which ups their close rates. Bonus of being in a format that makes sense with practical use on the road.

Marketers | Sales Managers - Get the info needed to make smart lead funnel strategies and messaging

Owners- Get quick visuals of direct data impact with canvasser hits and improved close rates.
